

FREDERICK STEINER

University of Texas at Austin

Frederick Steiner is the Henry M. Rockwell Chair in Architecture and dean of the School of Architecture at the University of Texas at Austin. He is a fellow of the American Society of Landscape Architects and the American Academy in Rome as well as an academic fellow of the Urban Land Institute. He is a visiting professor at Tsinghua University in Beijing, China, and was a Fulbright research scholar at Wageningen University in The Netherlands. Dean Steiner has worked with local, state, and federal agencies on diverse environmental plans and designs. During 2006 and 2007, he chaired the five-county Envision Central Texas Project, having served on its board of directors and executive committee since ECT was established in 2002. He was part of a University of Texas team that organized an exhibit on the resilience of the Gulf Coast and the city of New Orleans for the 2006 Venice Biennale. In 2005, he was on a team, selected from over 1,000 entries, to be one of five finalists in the United Flight 93 National Memorial Competition in Pennsylvania. His most recent books include; The Essential Ian McHarg: Writings on Design and Nature (Island Press, 2007), Planning and Urban Design Standards: Student Edition (with Kent Butler, John Wiley & Sons, 2006), and Human Ecology: Following Nature's Lead (Island Press, 2002). He teaches courses in the areas of environmental impact assessment, landscape analysis, and landscape architecture theory. Dean Steiner received a Ph.D., M.A., and Master of Regional Planning from the University of Pennsylvania as well as a Master of Community Planning and a B.S. in Design from the University of Cincinnati. He was awarded an honorary Master of Philosophy in Human Ecology from the University of the Atlantic.
